Probability of equal to or greater than 6" of snow
Saturday Evening into Early Sunday Morning

- ✓ Overview: Increasing confidence on low pressure tracking towards the Mid Atlantic region on Saturday and then southeast of the region Saturday evening into Sunday.
- ✓ What's Changed? Increased confidence of a warning-level snowfall for interior Southern CT and the interior Lower Hudson Valley.
- ✓ Potential Hazard and Impacts:
 - ✓ Accumulating snow/sleet (4-6"+) is likely across the far interior.
 - ✓ Low probability of accumulating snow/sleet for NYC and the coast.
 - ✓ A period of strong winds (gusts up to 50 mph) possible along southeast coastal sections (particularly E LI).
 - ✓ Minor coastal flood and shoreline impacts possible.
- ✓ Forecast Challenges: With a marginally cold airmass in place, the exact storm track and intensity will be crucial for precipitation types and amounts, particularly for the city and coast. These details are expected to become clearer over the next 24-36 hours as the pieces of energy that will be forcing this system become better initialized by the weather models.
